

is publishing news of 149 years ago today.)

1856: No boats have been running on the Delaware Canal for more than a week, so there is beginning to be a shortage of coal, lumber and other goods.

Because of a break in the aqueduct at Black's Eddy, the canal is lined for miles with loaded boats.

The boats will deliver the goods as soon as the canal is repaired.