

Cost Of Project

He said he believed the city wasn't in a position to get involved in such a project at this time because "it can't afford it, and secondly, because it is not a desirable project."

The channel deepening would be a great advantage to the city, Mayor Smith said, "because it would not only aid the fishing, make it possible for greater use of the river by people who own boats, but it would also have certain advantages of flood control measure and would allow the development of a city marina at the confluence of the Lehigh and Delaware rivers."

Goldsmith, who said he will continue to lead the opposition, said the channel would provide traffic for 500 motorboats "which are noisy and high-powered and would ruin the river in every direction."

He said two or three of the boats would spoil swimming, the
